Solar panel approval requirements

Overview

Do you need a permit to install solar panels?

Before installing solar panels, contractors must meet local solar permit requirements by obtaining approval from the Authority Having Jurisdiction (AHJ). Since solar panel permit requirements and building codes vary widely, understanding local solar permitting rules is essential, especially when additional zoning regulations are involved.

Why do you need a solar panel permit?

Meeting all solar panel permit requirements helps avoid delays, penalties, or potential removal orders. Proper solar permitting protects both homeowners and installers by ensuring systems are installed safely, legally, and in full compliance with jurisdictional rules.

What is a solar permit?

A solar permit is a document issued by local municipalities allowing individuals or businesses to install solar panels and PV systems. Solar permits are required in many jurisdictions to ensure solar installations meet local and federal building codes and safety standards. Why do you need a permit for solar?

What happens if you install solar panels without a permit?

If you install solar panels without a permit, you may be fined and forced to remove your system. Although permits can increase your total project costs, they are a necessary expense as unpermitted installations may not qualify for the tax incentives and rebates that can reduce your total investment in solar.

How long does the solar permit process take?

How long does the solar permit process typically take?

On average, the permit process for a residential solar installation will take between three weeks and three months, depending on many factors. Although working with a local expert can help you speed up your approvals, processing times vary greatly across the country.

Who is responsible for obtaining a solar building permit?

Typically, an approved and licensed contractor is responsible for handling permit applications, though some states allow property owners to obtain solar building permits themselves.
