Harare- Zimbabwe has achieved a historic milestone in its energy sector, recording its highest electricity generation output to date at 1,619 MW, according to the latest data from the Zimbabwe Power Company (ZPC) on May 23, 2025. This surge, up from 1,300 MW the previous day and an average of 1,200.

Zimbabweans are breathing a sigh of relief as the nation celebrates a significant improvement in electricity supply, following a surge in domestic power generation. The development marks a critical turning point in the country's long-struggling energy sector, with authorities reporting record-high.

INTENSIVE Energy Users Group (IEUG) chairperson Eddie Cross says private players are driving over 16 000 megawatts (MW) worth of power generation projects to help bridge Zimbabwe's widening electricity supply gap. This comes as the country's power utility firm, Zesa Holdings, has capital.

Local generation comes from Kariba Hydropower, Hwange coal-fired power Station, and three small thermal power plants. Domestic generation comes from Kariba Hydropower, Hwange coal-fired power Station, and three small thermal power plants. Supplementary power is imported from Mozambique, Democratic.

The IEG is a crucial measure of power production as it tracks changes in the volume of electricity generated over time using 2019 as the benchmark period. A rise in the index signifies increased production, while a drop indicates a decline. The latest official figures, showing a quarter-on-quarter.

ZESA Holdings (Pvt) Ltd is a Zimbabwean state-owned firm tasked with generating, transmitting, and distributing energy. It has delegated this task to its subsidiaries, Zimbabwe Power Company (ZPC) and Zimbabwe Electricity Transmission and Distribution Company (ZETDC). Other subsidiaries are ZESA.
